What's New in the Adobe Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.1.1)?

1. Field of the Invention The invention relates to X-ray examination devices. Specifically, the invention relates to a combination stationary X-ray unit and a moveable tabletop X-ray unit that are used in conjunction with a patient examination table. 2. Description of the Related Art The use of a combination stationary X-ray unit and a moveable tabletop X-ray unit is known in the art. Such a system is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 5,294,181 to Moore, et al. The Moore patent discloses an X-ray inspection device having a tabletop X-ray unit and a stationary X-ray unit that are used in conjunction with a patient examination table. In the Moore device, a moveable tabletop X-ray unit is slideably mounted to a stationary X-ray unit, and the stationary X-ray unit is slideably mounted to a patient examination table. A patient can be positioned on the patient examination table by a technician. The technician then slides the tabletop X-ray unit away from the stationary X-ray unit, thus enabling the technician to access the patient examination table. The technician then slides the tabletop X-ray unit toward the stationary X-ray unit, thus positioning the tabletop X-ray unit over the patient for X-ray inspection. As the technician moves the tabletop X-ray unit back and forth, the tabletop X-ray unit remains stationary relative to the stationary X-ray unit. Conventional X-ray inspection devices having the stationary X-ray unit and the moveable tabletop X-ray unit also include a source of X-rays, a table on which the patient is positioned, and a detector located below the table. The X-rays produced by the stationary X-ray unit are emitted toward the detector and, after passing through the patient, are detected by the detector. The detector generates an analog signal in response to the detected X-rays. The analog signal is processed to produce an image of the patient in either a digital or an analog format. Conventional X-ray inspection devices generally require the technician to reposition the patient on the patient examination table each time the technician slides the tabletop X-ray unit relative to the stationary X-ray unit. The need for such repositioning is tedious and time consuming, as well as potentially harmful to the patient if the technician does not carefully reposition the patient. Furthermore, the repositioning of the patient may be uncomfortable to the patient due to the technician's sliding the patient
